Q: Is there a downside for updating an old projects to a new version of Delphi? Let's say that I have a project which I do not expect to be used anymore. I do not plan to develop this project anymore (or maybe I will, I don't know yet). Is there any downside, in terms of typesafety or any other kind of problem when I update the project to a new version of Delphi? A: You should do everything you can to avoid "down sides" (in terms of functionality or typesafety). But if you must, just try to avoid coding yourself in a position where adding in a new library might affect the code negatively in ways you don't expect. This is unlikely to be a factor if you're doing a refactoring, but think it might have ramifications if you just want to add a new feature.
