HOT AIR — FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology,” which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. In FIFA 22, the data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power gameplay. It is the first time the full range of the game has been utilised to such an extent, while also highlighting the immense amount of effort and science that goes into creating the dynamic systems of FIFA. Movement Data FIFA 22 puts you in the boots of some of the best players in the world as you progress through the different modes of the game. You must react quickly and accurately to the game’s speed and pace, and have to make split-second decisions while under huge amounts of pressure. The players’ movements in the game aren’t just used to power gameplay. The player’s movements and characteristics are also used to enhance the game’s visuals and audio. FIFA 22’s movement data is collected from 22 real-life players playing a full game in high-intensity motion capture suits and the data is used to power gameplay. Players include Ronaldo, Thiago Silva, Zlatan Ibrahimovic, Neymar, Dani Alves and Cesc Fabregas. During a match, these players move around the pitch at high speeds, while going back to ball or contesting for a header. Playing through a match in the suits is no easy task. Players are required to run, jump, sprint and tackle in a game that is physically exhausting. FIFA 22’s movement data is gathered from 22 real-life footballers from around the world. You can check them out below. FIFA 22 comes with a mix of motion capture-based animations and traditional ones, with improvements and new features that are specifically designed to reflect the style and character of the real-life player. As the football player moves, the animations are created to reflect that movement, rather than trying to capture every possible movement. The knee movement is tracked in movement capture, and used to create knee-kicks and other animations. The players’ different kit textures, as well as sweat and injuries, are also factored into the animation. Different players have different movement styles, so for example, Z

Create your Ultimate Team and team up with friends and other fans, and customize your teams kits and tactics before the game begins with pre-game formation builder, and manage your squad throughout the game's 33 matches by tapping on or off individual players. Live FIFA Street games – take your favourite player's skills and features directly to the pitch with FIFA Street games, featuring a shorter dribbling distance, power sliders, and super shots and passes, as well as the unique goal celebration move that you've seen in the games, FIFA Street Game modes also feature a complete set of action and control moves, including: corner kicks, pressing the Power Button to pass or shoot, long range shots, diagonal passes, sliding tackles, and a new FIFA Teammate Pass Control move.

Gameplay The object of the game is to score goals by passing the ball into a goal with your set of player's skills. A goalkeeper also is employed to prevent the other team from scoring. Players can also use their player-specific skills; such as speed, power, ball control, sprinting, free kicks, long passing, shooting, attacking, and defending. Players can use these skills individually or in combination by using the various formation or positioning. Alternatively players can choose to perform tricks with the ball while running with the ball. Players can pass the ball to teammates, run with the ball, dribble and shoot while sprinting, use a shoot on goal, pass to the dribbling player, use a tackle, or pass the ball to teammates or opponents. In game, players can be seen with a small indicator above the player's head. The tip of the indicator that the player is sprinting in the direction in which the player is sprinting. Players need to keep an eye on their running indicator and sprint with the active indicator to gain a faster speed. If the player sprints without keeping an eye on the indicator, the player will lose more time in gaining speed because this technique requires a split-second of visual and motor coordination.

Passing Players can pass to teammates or opponents by using the special buttons and skills of the player. The game will automatically check the trajectory of the ball when players pass. If the ball passes through or over the plane of the goal, the goal has been scored.

Rampage Players can pass the ball to teammates or opponents by using the special buttons and skills of the player. The game will automatically check the trajectory of the ball when players pass.
