The iconic "Sonic" character was introduced in 1991, and new trailers of the upcoming game have fans excited about what the future holds. Many fans have questioned why there is no new "Starfox" game, and now Nintendo has an explanation. Sonic the Hedgehog, while one of the most iconic video game characters, was initially created with the Nintendo Gameboy Game Boy games in mind. To be fair, video game franchises did not yet exist for the original Sonic games, which in 1991 were not even considered video games. While technically "Sonic" would be a part of the first ever video game franchise to feature Nintendo characters, one could argue that Sonic was overshadowed by Nintendo's characters like Mario and Princess Peach. That is why, aside from their Sonic the Hedgehog 2 game, Nintendo decided not to create Sonic video games for the Gameboy until 2006 with the release of Sonic the Hedgehog 4. After that, "Sonic" was tied to Mario in the new series of Nintendo's flagship video game franchise until Sonic's return in 2013. Starfox was introduced in 2001, which included a "Starfox" title for Sony's PlayStation 2 gaming console. That series ended in 2011 with Starfox Zero. While Starfox was introduced before the newest "Sonic" franchise, Nintendo decided not to bring Starfox to the Wii U after a similar cancellation of the latest "Mario" for the Wii U. That is why it is somewhat surprising that Starfox developer Namco Bandai is seemingly developing a new "Starfox" game that is not tied to Nintendo consoles. That game could be exclusive to Sony's PS4 gaming console. The new Sonic the Hedgehog game is simply called Sonic the Hedgehog. This

What's New In?

The present invention relates to a vehicle speed detecting apparatus which detects a vehicle speed based on a wheel speed signal obtained by a wheel speed sensor mounted on a vehicle wheel, and which is effective for preventing a slip of the vehicle from occurring. An electric vehicle, in which a motor is used as a drive source for running the vehicle, suffers from a difficulty that the speed of the vehicle is zero when the vehicle comes to a halt. If the vehicle comes to a halt in a state where the vehicle speed is zero, the tire of the driven wheel will skid, thus causing a possibility of occurrence of a slip. A device for detecting a vehicle speed by using a wheel speed sensor is disclosed in Japanese Published Patent Application No. 44733/1988 and a device for detecting a vehicle speed by a wheel speed sensor is disclosed in Japanese Published Patent Application No. 862/1988. In the former, a signal indicative of a wheel speed is inputted into a controller which controls a vehicle engine to be used for driving the vehicle by the motor. A vehicle speed is detected based on an angular velocity of the wheel which is obtained by deriving the wheel speed signal. In the latter, a wheel speed sensor is mounted on each wheel of the vehicle, and a vehicle speed is detected by comparing, at a predetermined interval of time, a difference between two angular velocities each obtained by differentiating the wheel speed signals which are obtained from the respective wheels. The former device uses two different wheel speed sensors and is accompanied by a disadvantage that a cost of the device is raised because of an increase in the number of parts. In addition, a slip of the vehicle may not be prevented unless the wheel speed signals are calculated at all times. The latter device is accompanied by a disadvantage that the vehicle slip is caused if the wheel speed signals differ from each other when the two angular velocities obtained by differentiating the wheel speed signals differ from each other due to an error in the wheel speed sensor. Therefore, it is necessary to provide a vehicle speed detecting device which prevents the vehicle slip from occurring, can detect the vehicle speed accurately and efficiently, and can simply be structured.Sonographic differential diagnosis of benign breast lesions.
